Shepherd-Walwyn (Publishers) Ltd. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, Travels with My Harp: The Complete Autobiography, Mary O'Hara, Mary O'Hara's life story is something only the most inspired press agent could ever hope to concoct' New York Times 'An aura of genius attends her, something indefinable which goes straight to the heart' Evening Press, Dublin Mary O'Hara won global acclaim as a singer and harpist. Her recordings sold by their millions and in her concerts and television shows audiences worldwide were thrilled by the warmth of her personality. Yet behind this public success lay a personal tragedy. Born in the west of Ireland and educated in a convent school, she became a singing star at the age of 16. She fell in love with a young America poet Richard Selig but their marriage only lasted 15 months before his tragic death. Overwhelmed by grief, Mary continued to sing while searching for a convent in which to live the remainder of her life in prayer and silence. She found the answer at the strict Benedictine monastery of Stanbrook in the West Midlands. 12 years later, spiritually enriched but fragile in health, she emerged and restarted her career, winning even wider praise on her worldwide tours. She had her own season at the London Palladium, appeared on the Royal Variety Show, sang at all the major concert halls in the English-speaking world and made frequent guest appearances on television chat shows. Her television shows Minstrel of the Dawn and Mary O'Hara and Friends drew viewers by the millions. Pressed to tell her story, she wrote The Scent of the Roses, (Michael Joseph, 1980, Fontana paperback, 1981) which quickly became a best seller. Travels with My Harp takes up the story with many amusing anecdotes from concert tours around the world, but also...
