Excerpt: . . . was never in fact transmitted at all. Properly construed, the original declaration was based on an incorrect transmission only. The amendment sought to introduce as a basis of the action actual non-transmission, which makes an entirely new and distinct cause of action. Judgment reversed as to the telegraph company, Lnnrxm, J. , dissenting; and affirmed as to the railroad company, all concurring. Gross-bill of lwpti0ns dismissed. July 23, 189-L Action for penalty. Before Judge IIUTGHINS. Jackson superior court. August term, 1893. The declaration was against both the telegraph company and the railway company. It alleged, as to each, that it was a corporation with a line of wires partly in this State, engaged in telegraphing for the public, and having an oflice and agent in the county Where the suit was brought; and that they were liable to plaintiff for the statutory penalty, for that: He delivered...
